This report is a joint effort of:

The Center for Integrated Agricultural Systems (CIAS) is a research center for sustainable agriculture in the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, University of Wisconsin-Madison. CIAS fosters multidisciplinary inquiry and supports a range of research, curriculum and program development projects. It brings together university faculty, farmers, policy makers and others to study relationships between farming practices, farm profitability, the environment and rural vitality. For more information, visit www.cias.wisc.edu or call 608-262-5200.

The Agricultural Innovation Center, which is part of University of Wisconsin Cooperative Extension, fosters entrepreneurship and innovation in Wisconsin agriculture by providing business development assistance directly to entrepreneurs and by supporting opportunities in the emerging local food distribution system and value-added processing. We offer business training and resources for educators as well as individual entrepreneurs with the goal of helping Wisconsin entrepreneurs turn money-making ideas into profitable business ventures. For more information, visit www.uwex.edu/ces/agmarkets/aic/index.cfm.
